The task was to develop an inner-city area - the “Kleyerquartier” - in the Gallus district of Frankfurt. The aim was to create an attractive urban residential area with a subordinate proportion of commercial uses and a high degree of open space quality. The overall concept is based on other popular city quarters in Frankfurt, which are characterized by a high variety of residential, commercial and gastronomy. From this approach, an attractive district with numerous public and private usage options develops, which takes up the diversity of the neighboring buildings and blends in harmoniously with the context. The formation of the building structure and façades stand for the diversity in the unity.
