The competition “Wohnen am Volkspark“ was the prelude to the urban and open space planning development of the area west of the federal motorway and south of the Volkspark. Along with the capping of the motorway in the Altona area, there is new development potential along the motorway in the neighboring districts. The separate parts of the city can grow together again. The aim of the urban development in this area was to do justice to the great importance of the Volkspark, to upgrade the landscape axes running through the area and to create a new green district, which in a modern form deals with the theme of a compact yet green, livable garden city new type.
